

The visor extension fits to the front of the pulled-down visor.

To install, fit the two strong elastic bands round the visor, about two inches from each end

With the visor folded up towards the roof, and the picture on the extension facing down and upside down, slip the extension into the bands. The bands should go into the slits in the extension so that the top half of the extension is held by them.

This will allow the extension to be pulled down and pushed back up in relation to the visor.

When the visor is deployed, down, the picture will be visible from outside the vehicle.

When the sun is low, the extension can be pulled down to increase the visor's depth.
